Denese Oates is a Sydney-based sculptor who has been exhibiting for over thirty years. This show has developed from her fascination with the natural grids and lace-like patterns that are found in our environment. Denese discovers fractals in the landscape that reveal a different kind of beauty in the lattice of tree branches, corals and waterways surrounding us. The organic architecture of plants, animal antlers and blood vessels are all reflected in her copper and steel sculptures. Denese has exhibited in numerous solo and group exhibitions nationwide and her work is represented in the collections of Parliament House, Artbank, University of NSW and Christchurch City (NZ).
